

Former President, CEO of NAACP Speaks at The University of Scranton

Posted 18 March 2005

Kweisi Mfume, former Congressman, president and CEO of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, recently spoke at The University of Scranton's Speaker Series on Diversity. More than 100 students, faculty and Scranton area residents attended his lecture entitled "Diversity and Democracy: Brown vs. the Board of Education." Standing from left are Rev. Scott R. Pilarz, S.J., president of The University of Scranton, Mr. Mfume, and Jo Ann Usry, director of the Office of Equity and Diversity at The University of Scranton.

