

November 2, 1971

University of Scranton associate professor of English, Dr. Louis D. Mitchell served as chairman of the Literature Section for a conference on Black Studies at State University of New York - Binghamton, Friday and Saturday.

The two-day conference was entitled "Linkages in the Black Heritage."

Dr. Mitchell teaches seventeenth and eighteenth century English literature courses at the University of Scranton. Recently, he introduced several courses in Black Studies and Black Literature into the graduate and undergraduate curriculum at the U of S.

He is currently offering a freshman interdisciplinary course in Black Studies, with Stephen J. Casey, an instructor in the university Theology Department.