Sherman F. Wooden, president of the Center for Anti-Slavery Studies in Montrose and the author of “The Place I Call Home,” returned recently to the campus of The University of Scranton for a reception and book signing at the Weinberg Memorial Library. Wooden served as director of multicultural affairs at Scranton before retiring from that position in 2010. Standing, from left, are, Michael Knies, associate professor and Special Collections librarian at Scranton; Sondra Myers, director of the University's Schemel Forum; Wooden, and Rosetta Adera, director of the University's Office of Equity and Diversity.
