Students form Black Culture Club; first meeting set for tomorrow

BY LIZ ALTEMUS -

A step toward providing the first social and cultural organization for minority students at the University has been taken with the formation of the Black Culture Club.

Junior Gary Bell said he first recognized the need for such an organization last month.

"Although black students are active in many facets of the University, the club provides an organization to which they can belong collectively," he said.

Bell said the group's main objective is to discuss contemporary issues.

The organization has petitioned for a charter and has been approved by the Student Personnel office. Eleven interested students have already signed the petition. Ten is the minimum number of signatures for charter approval.

A constitution is in the works, but has not yet been submitted to Karen Pennington, associate dean of Students and Student Activities coordinator, for approval, said Bell.

"Once the club is formed and official, the whole student body will benefit from it," he stated.

The name Black Culture Club was chosen so as not to suggest that it was formed only for those of black heritage.

Bell is the official representative for the group until officers can be elected. Election of officers will follow after organizational meetings are completed. The first of these meetings will be tomorrow at 7:30 p.m.
